Weather for July.
[Ed. R. Hicks in Word and Works.]
The month ought to begin with moderate summer temperature and minimum of storm disturbances in sight. The 3rd, and days next to it, will bring a marked rise in temperature, with very manifest tendencies to storms—electrical and otherwise.
From the 6th to 11th is a regular storm period in which, most likely, we will encounter some of the warmest weather of the summer. On and about the 8th, 9th and 10th expect some very active developments. A brief respite from very high temperature is apt to pass eastward during the days immediately preceding the reactionary return to warmth and storms about the 14th and 15th.

Threatening storm clouds rising from the northwest, are sure to prevail in the regular period—19th to 22nd. The 20th is the day when the full strength of Venus will combine with "Vulcan" on that, and the two days next following to the eastward, watch their "antics." A marked fall from oppressively high temperature ought to follow from about the 21st in the West to the 24th in the East. By that time the reaction will have started in the West, growing warmer in its eastward progress, culminating in some storm flurries about 26th to 27th. The month will end hot, with a regular storm period central on the 31st.

The following are the places the meetings are to be held at and the number of delegates to which each Township is entitled, taking the Cleveland vote of 1888 as shown in the County Clerk's office, on a basis of one delegate for every 30 votes cast for Cleveland and one for every 15 and fraction over:
